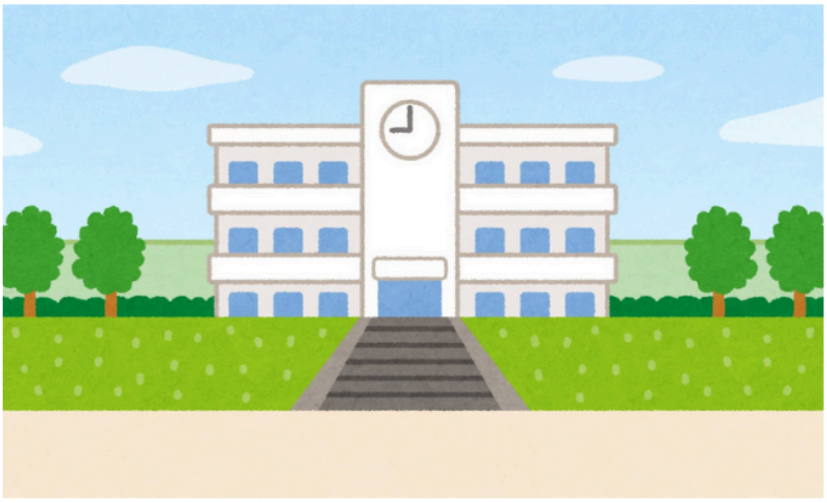
Undivided presents:

It’s time for summer!

Once the school year is over, my routine will change for the summer.



For part of the summer, I will go to summer school.

My teacher will be:

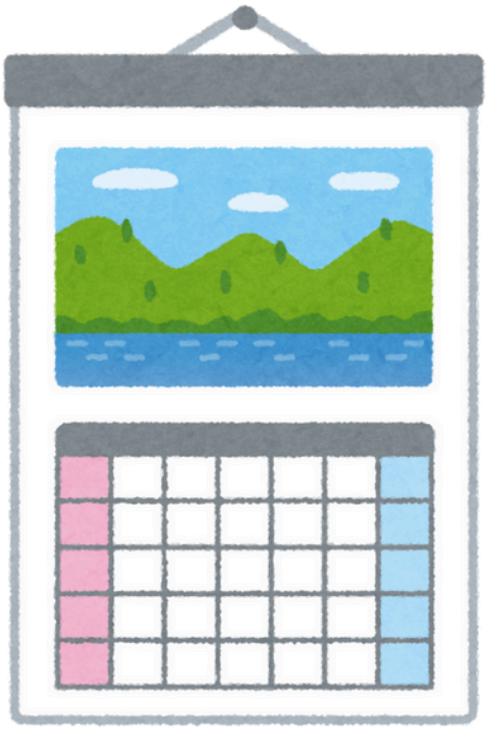
My classroom will be:

When summer school is over, I will do different activities.

Here is what my new daily routine will be over the summer:

Mon	Tues	Wed	Thurs	Fri	Sat	Sun

If I forget what's happening next, my family will help remind me what’s on the calendar.



Here are some activities my family has planned this summer:

Our plan might change along the way, but we can handle it.

Here are some activities I would like to do this summer:

When I want to go play outside, I can tell an adult, “I want to go outside,” or “I’m ready to play outside.”

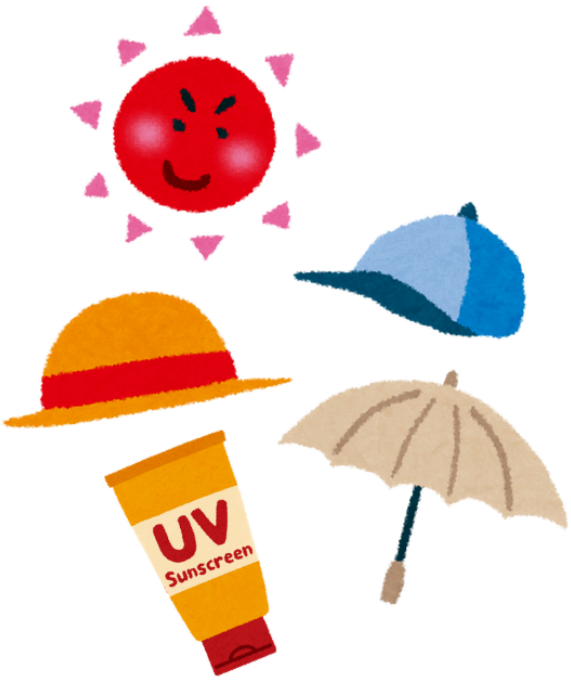
Adults want to know where I am to help keep me safe.

They also want to help me keep my body safe in the sun.

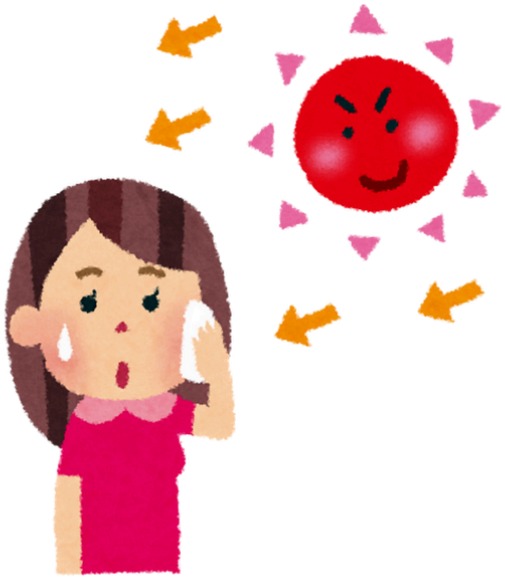
During summer, the weather is hot! The sun shines brighter, and it feels very warm outside.

Staying outside in the sun for too long can cause sunburn, which is when skin turns red and hurts.

Wearing sunscreen is a way people keep their bodies safe from sunburn.



People also wear sunglasses, hats, and light clothes to stay cooler in the sun.



When I am outside in the sun, my body will sweat more. Drinking water can help my body stay cool.

If I feel too hot, I can take a break in the shade or near a fan.

Summer can be a fun time to play and make good memories until school starts again.

The end

www.undivided.io

Life-changing support for families raising kids with disabilities